

Texas Advocacy Project, Inc. Statement on COVID-19

At Texas Advocacy Project, we continue to monitor the ongoing developments relating to COVID-19 and its impact and are closely following information shared by the CDC as well as local and state agencies about the Coronavirus (COVID-19). As you know, the safety of our clients and staff is always my top priority.

The team here at the Project, wants everyone to know, during this crisis, we are working diligently to ensure uninterrupted services. We are in the first phase of transitioning to work in a full virtual office environment. Our legal lines, case referral email, and online service application all remain open. While there may be a slightly longer than usual delay in appointment scheduling, rest assured, survivors needing free legal services, will receive the assistance they have become accustomed to from Texas Advocacy Project.

For those who would like, or have requested, a presentation from our Training Department please know that we are enacting a "social distancing" protocol. This means, that for a short time, these events will move to virtual platforms such as webinars. You may find a full list of available presentations on our website.

This work has always been challenging, and we deeply appreciate the support of the many individuals who help guarantee our services are available. We are concerned for those who will be asked to quarantine in an abusive home, for students whose schools are shut down and are concerned about their legal rights, for health care providers who will be over-stretched, for the many shelters who must remain opened, and for everyone else who is at greater risk because of this virus. We are thankful, that with help from the community, we will remain open, business (almost) as usual.

With gratitude,
